To whom it may concern,

We first became aware of the Splashblade product whilst listening to the Radio 2 Drive Time show hosted by Simon Mayo. Simon was interviewing Gary Daly the Director of Splashblade, a very enthusiastic gentleman with a broad Yorkshire accent who was describing perfectly a product which suited our needs down to the ground. We were looking for a product for our en-suit bathrooms which would help retain access water bypassing the shower curtains.

I contacted Gary that very same day.

The problem that we had was the access amount of water that came from the showers onto the bathroom floor causing ponding and possibly a slip hazard. The shower curtains did the job to a certain extent but we needed a better product that was both efficient and cost effective. On contacting Gary and listening a little more about his product we arranged for a trial period and fitted out four bathrooms. Gary personally came down to London to fit these himself which is something very rarely seen from a Directors prospective.

After a month of trials the feedback from the user was fantastic and an order for a total fit out of the building was placed, with further orders in the pipeline for our other Nido buildings.

Nido Spitalfields is the tallest student accommodation in the World, housing 1200 international students and as Building Manager I have no hesitation of recommending the SPLASHBLADE.
